fronch Subroideries, GO TO LICUTER'S TEMPLE OF FACILION ciety as a Tonic.

Ralph Waldo Emerson, in a cent lecture, thus speaks of the tonic virtue of society; We were delicate machines, and required the nicest treatment. We required tonics, but they should be of the right hind. The flame of life burned too fast in pure crygen, and pature had therefore tempered the air with arote. Tonics generally were force pumps which exhausted the strength which it was proposed to supply. The best and most exhilirating tonic was society. Mr. Emerson then noticed how societies seemed to be dis tributed according to the tastes and tendencies of men. Some liked singing; some were fond of debate, etc. John Aubrey tells of Hobbs that he used to say there was a good library at the Earl of Derbyshire's, but a want of convertation, and that this was a great inconvenience. In the country, one's memory and invention became, as it were, covered with moss, like an old wooden gate.— The advice was good which the father gave the boy, "My son, go ten miles to see a man of good conversation, for one mile to see a fair city." The man was to be prefered to the town and if Mr. Emerson were sked what what was the use of New York, he would answer "that it was useful for the advantages of conversation." All mankind were competitors in conversation. The physician, the clergyman, in their daily rounds among their patients and narishoners, did good by their healthy talk. The main object of the dinner, the club and the fireside was conversation. When we have anything to impart, we feel anxious to do so. A piece of news burned in one's mind like money in a little boy's pecket; until it be communicated. Conversation was the laboratory and workshop of the student. Every time we converse we acquire more ability to do so, in the same way that mechanical skill is improved by exercise. The days we remember with most pleasure are these we have passed with agreeable companions.

The very urst of those obligations he obedience, prompt and unhesitating, to all "hivs which stand unrepealed on the na-" tlonal statute-books.

That the Government of the United States is modeled in consonance with the most liberal principles in social polity, is a fact of world-wide notoriety. That The atmost freedom is allowed to the individual, consistent with the well-being of society, is a fact equally well known. None but evil-disposed persons need ever the their inclinations restrained by law from the freest exercise—the most liber · al netion. None but knaves or fools will attempt denial of facts so patent that they amount to political axioms with inen who have had opportunities of comparison.

But it must be distinctly understood that, while this Government was framed, with a wisdom on the part of its founders which justly excites universal admiration, so as to secure an asylum from oppression for the liberty-loving of all lands, it was never intended to make its Constitution a hiding-place for crime.-It must be remembered that it is a Goverument, and, however many liberties it guarantees, the liberty of disobediences is not among them.

One of the most frequent mistakes made by our foreign-born citizens is in the abourd-notions often entertained as to the privileges accruing to them by virtue of their citizenship. In passing from the subject to the citizen; in leaving the narrow limits of individuality allowed him by the more despetic Government under which he was born, feeling no appreciable restraint upon his actions, the foreigner sometimes forgets that liberfy does not mean licence, and that even in the land of his adoption there are fixed limits to personal volition, beyond which none can go without becoming smenable to violated laws, made especially for the protection of society at large against the trespass of restless and erratic spirits of malevolent, disposition. And the most ridiculous of oil things is to hear one of these fledglings, when caught tripping against those barriers, become eloquent of his rights and garru-lous of his wrongs as an American citizen, forsooth !- volunteering recondite commentaries upon the Constitution with that sublime assurance which usually springs from a union of extreme ignora nee and supreme self-conceit. We uped not travel beyond the limits of this

Now with all due deference to the it is high time such follies should cease, and all who hold, or hope to hold citizen, ship in these United States, should be made to comprehend the fact, that no main, nor class of men, can be permitted, on any pretence whatever, to put his own interpretation upon the legislative enactments of the highest councils in the land, deluding himself with the idea that obedience depends upon the good pleasthe of the citizen. It should be made manifest to the dullest comprehension that our laws are not made to be broken, but, while they stand unrepealed, must be obeyed, though the heaven of Polygamy, or any other kindred crime, should fall, and the obscene idol that holds his orgies therein; be cast down "to die among

We think, in all seriousness, that not only our native forn citizens, but foreigners, of whatever name, should learn, if not before, at least soon after their arri val on our shores, that, in coming here, they have not left behind them the reatvaints of civilized society, but, that they come to a land of liberal yet imperative laws, and of good government .-If there are my "who have left their country for their country's good," why it must be expected to hearthem declaim loudly of persecution and oppres sion in any case, since their mormal condition is that of outlawry, hence all just la must necessarily be oppressive to them. Hence, too, we insist that no amphilitons Norseman, no Welshuing with more d's in his pame then idens in his cramium, and opt in all things save obedience, should presume to undercharter of their liberties. THE latest advices from Japan ansounce that Hiogo, the chief port of the island sea, is thrown open to the commerce of the world, and all restrictions on trade with foreigners removed by the joint action of the Tycoon and Mikado. The sanction of the latter to the treate, which has been mithheld beretofere, was only obtained with great effort on the part of the Tydoon's officers, backed by an army of thirty thousand men and a feet-and at the same time it was feared that the whole empire would be drenched in blood, so furious was the indignation against the foreigners. The consent of the Mikado baving been obtained at last, it is believed that bereafter no trouble will exist and an immense trade will speedily spring up.

Is Polygamy a Relic of Barbarism? MASONIC FESTIVAL.—The members of Mt. Moriah Lodge, and particularly the Managers of the forthcoming Festival, are making all the efforts possible to have their Washington Birth-day Ball a big affair and perhaps the grandest success, of the soirce character, ever given in Masonic Table 2018. Any schoolboy, who has been instructed in the selement of history, can give a satisfactory answer to this question. It is one of the most obvious lessons of history, that Monogamy is the necessary utilized in the refinement and exultation of humanity, in its progress from the gross and indiscriminate passion of the animal, up to the present sanctity and purity of the marriage relation. In the sections in which Polygamy is still Any schoolboy, who has been instructpracticed. we inveriably and that it is not the only relic of darkness which they possess. but that they are, in fact, portions of the earth's surface from which the waters of barbarism have not yet subsided. With the exception of these,

> that the Polggimist will find examples to support him in his iniquity.
> Further, it will be admitted by every candid reader of bistory, that Polygamy, along with other institutions of bar-barism, has always disappeared before the advance of civilization. Whenever the people of any nation began to have a clear conception of virtue and morality, and a proper estimate of the rights of wo nan, they hade farewell to Polyg amy. And, accordingly, at the present day, it subsists only smong men who bave not yet attained those qualities. Polygamy fourishes among the tascivious Turks, among the semi-barbaros s nations of Asia, among the wandering Arabs of the desert, among the savage Indians of the plains, among the animals and beasts of the field, and among the followers of Brigham Young in the Territors of Utah. It a man is to be judged by the company he keeps, every person who has any respect for his own character; should shun the practice of Polygamy. Nor can any reasonable man en-tution" is a "relic of barbarism." But the grand position of the Polygamist is, that the institution is sanctione by Scripture. The folly of this argument is so apparent that I am almost ashamed to attempt to answer it. A portion of the Old Testament is clearly a traditionary history of the customs, were and general doings of an early date. That many of the men of that age were a barbarous people, admits of no denial; for all that is necessary to be thoroughly convinced of the fact, is to read the Book of Kings or Judges. Many of them were every whit as de-ceitful and mendacious in their engagements, and as relentless and bloody their wara as the savoge Indians of this present day. Is it, then, surprising, that among such a barbarous people. the barbarous institution of Polygamy subsisted? And is it not abominable and unreasonable to suppose, that the Almighty designed us to follow their example—to give no quarter in battle, to destroy the women and children of our foot, and to cherish the practice of Polygemy! As well might it be argued that we should confine ourselves to the use of their rude implements of agriculuse of their rude implements of agriculture, and primitive weapons of war, or that we should live in tents, and give our entire time to the management of, flocks and berds. Polygamy is not entorced in the Decalogue, and we have no reason to believe that it is any more divine id its origin than any of the other barbarous practices. While we venersite the patriarche of the Bible, as being the instruments chosen by the Almighty for the revelation of a portion of His will to the world, we must set the same time remember, that their character was intrinsically barbarous, and that, consequently, many of their actions, recorded
